Which of the following is the correct definition of a router?

- A. A router connects networks together isolating traffic within each network.
- B. A router is any computer, printer, or other electronic device that could potentially communicate with another device over the network.
- C. A router is the physical layout of the cables and devices on a network.
- D. A router allows one computer or device to make requests on behalf of another over a network.

Correct Answer: A

Section: (none)

Explanation

Explanation/Reference:

When conditions require greater distances or an increase in the number of nodes/repeaters, then a bridge, router or switch can be used to connect multiple networks together. These devices join two or more separate networks, allowing network design criteria to be restored. Switches allow network designers to build large networks that function well. The reduction in costs of bridges and switches reduces the impact of repeater rules on network design.

Each network connected via one of these devices is referred to as a separate collision domain in the overall network.

Gretchen accidentally deleted a file on her MacBook Air while traveling. She backs up regularly to Time Machine, but did not backup while she was away. From which location would you recover the deleted file?

- A. FileVault
- B. Local Snapshots
- C. The encrypted Time Machine backup
- D. The Time Machine folder in /System/Library/

Correct Answer: B

Section: (none)

Explanation

Explanation/Reference:

When you use a Mac notebook, you might not always be near your Time Machine backup drive. When your backup drive isn't connected, Time Machine creates copies of files you create, modify or delete and stores them on your startup disk. These local backup copies are called "local snapshots." This feature lets you revert or recover a file if you accidentally change or delete it. When your backup device becomes available, Time Machine copies local snapshots from your startup disk to your normal backup drive. After the copy is finished, Time Machine doesn't remove your local snapshot data. This way your backup files are still available if you need to restore an item the next time you're disconnected.
